Hi [REDACTED],

I spoke to my team leader regarding a similar issue with a different premises and if your concerns are over use of the land, that it is a civil matter and as such we cannot get involved. In which case we would suggest you discuss this either directly with the premises or seek legal advice.

I have checked the system and to serve alcohol in the space, the premises have applied for temporary occasional licences. Occasional licences only last for a maximum of fourteen days but can run consecutively. Occasional licence applications are advertised online for 7 days from when the application is processed by the licensing department and during this time, the application is open for objections in writing to licensing@edinburgh.gov.uk.

Further info can be viewed at the following link: object-to-an-occasional-alcohol-licence-application \(edinburgh.gov.uk\)

The registers are updated daily so you need to keep an eye on the register if you wish to object.

Hope this helps.

Kind regards,
Pixie
