

36690 Land off Old Liston Road, Newbridge

Regarding a landlord's environmental review of the above-referenced site (plan to follow by separate e-mail) to establish if there has ever been any petroleum storage on the site and the current status of any tanks.

The full site address is Land off Old Liston Road, Newbridge, Edinburgh, EH28 8SJ (Centred at NGR: 311715, 672341).

Please would you provide the following information where available:

Does the Petroleum Licensing Authority archive hold any records of petroleum storage at or in the immediate vicinity of the site, either in above ground or below ground tanks?

On the site boundary, please refer to the western 'J' shaped section (OUTLINED IN BLUE WITH X). This comprised a former Continental Tyres factory (I have also attached a historic map segment to show the tanks on-site and the immediate vicinity)

Yes.

If yes:

How many tanks were there and what was their capacity? Please provide a plan showing the tank locations if possible.

One x 3000-gallon tank sunk in 1967 and one x 3000-gallon tank sunk in 1977.

How long were the tanks in use/known to be present on-site?

Tanks were used until 2000.

What is the current status of the tanks? If they have been decommissioned by filling, please detail fill material.

We hold a letter from Continental Tyres which suggests their intention to decommission the tanks from 10 Jan 2000 in accordance with HSE guidance. No further information is held regarding de-commissioning.

Are there any known leaks or spills associated with the tanks?

Are there any records of integrity testing? If so when was this undertaken and what were the results?

There is no relevant information held.

Please provide any additional information on the site e.g. in relation to petroleum storage, diesel storage or any other substances, where available.

There was above-ground barrel store on site containing 20 x 45-gallons = 900 gallons. I have attached plans to aid location of sunk tanks.
