All claims are investigated on a case-by-case basis and each claim is assessed on its own merits. If a claim is made against the Council, it is sent to the Council's insurers. The council must use the nominated claims handlers for their insurers to investigate and determine whether liability attaches. They nominate a firm of specialist claims handlers to assess whether or not the Council is legally liable. The Council has no input into the decision and cannot influence it. This is to ensure that all claims are dealt with in a fair and reasonable way. The Council cannot comment on processes for other organisations (should the claim not be for the Council).
